Slick Chick Treatment

Keratosis Pilaris are those little rough red or white bumps that annoyingly plaque the backs of arms and sometimes the thighs are called "keratosis pilaris." They're not acne, it's actually a genetic follicular skin condition that's also known as "chicken skin" because of it's resemblance to, well, chicken skin.

There is no cure, however, you can greatly improve its appearance with a SilkPeel Microdermabrasion treatment and a Keratosis pilaris treatment plan. Includes daily application of a cream or gel with vitamin A, benzoyl peroxide, steroid cortisone, or alpha hydroxy acids. A daily skin care regimen of exfoliating and moisturizing should be incorporated to maintain your SilkPeel results. Although you may feel like the only one who doesn't have smooth, beautiful skin, you're not. In fact, keratosis pilaris affects 50-80% of teenagers and 40% of adults. You will feel like one slick chick after this treatment! $165.00 to $250.00 depending on size of affected area.

Turn Back the Hands of Time

Frequently the focus of cosmetic improvement is the face. Yet, one of the most age-telling body features is our hands. As we age, our hands lose firmness and plumpness and begin to look bony and fragile with vein and joint protrusion, thin crepey skin texture and often they've become flecked with brown spots from sun exposure. Combating the aging hand syndrome takes more than hand cream (though that simple step does make a difference). The latest technology has given us a set of procedures that will have similar effects as those we have been able to accomplish for the face. Patients whose hands are pigmented with sun or "age" spots may choose to be pre-treated with our SilkPeel Microdermabrasion service to remove dead dry skin cells and lighten brown spots.

Going a step further, Radiesse® injections immediately re-plump and replenish volume to the back of the hands to provide a supple and youthful appearance instantly. Placed beneath the skin, Radiesse raises the skin level so that tendons, joints and veins lose their prominence. Radiesse® provides instant and durable long lasting results.

Because Radiesse® provides a scaffolding for collagen-building, the body's own collagen interweaving into this structure keeps the skin feeling softly natural and smooth.

Silk Peel Microdermabrasion Treatment Only $55.00 per session

Radiesse® $650.00 per syringe
